TROY RISING

A regional economic force
   for today and tomorrow

TROY’S REPUTATION AS A leading Michigan business center is well deserved. Repeatedly recognized as a top town for growing opportunity, Troy moves into the future embracing and realizing progressive ideas through the dedication of a pro-business local government and an engaged citizenry.

The community is at the heart of a multi-disciplined movement in fostering a high performing knowledge economy. The Troy Chamber of Commerce, a leading organization for connecting businesses, works to improve the business climate in the area. Troy is also the home of Automation Alley, a highly-respected regional technology consortium.

The city’s premier business districts are home to Fortune 500 companies, professional services and distinctive retailers and restaurants. Troy can also boast the lowest tax rate of any major city in Oakland County, a solid bond rate and an ideal centralized location within the Detroit Metro region with easy access to local, regional and global markets. Its well-educated population of more than 80,000 enjoys above average incomes, appealing and safe neighborhoods, award-winning public services and some of the highest ranked schools in Michigan.

The track forward includes plans to renew the Big Beaver Road commercial corridor in accordance with smart growth principles as well as an initiative to develop a new multi-million dollar transit center and a transit district.

A community that knows where it wants to go and has a strategy for getting there, Troy is poised to claim the lead in tomorrow’s economy. Why not join us?

The planned $7 million Transit Center is expected to boost economic activity and property values, while the Big Beaver Road corridor renewal is projected to create up to 28,000 new jobs and add 10,000 residential units, according to the Big Beaver Corridor Study.

The city has seven million square feet of retail space, 18 million square feet of office space, and 20 million square feet of manufacturing/engineering space.

Troy has continuous public infrastructure upgrades to support development, including transportation, sanitary and stormwater systems.

ON THE MOVE

We’re a Chamber of progress. We’re a Chamber for the future and for growth.

THERE’S NO STANDING STILL. The Troy Chamber of Commerce is making changes to help its members—small and large businesses and nonprofit organizations from throughout the Troy area—survive and thrive amid the current economic conditions.

The Chamber is a community leader in the efforts to break ground on a new regional transit center in the first half of 2010—a center expected to create jobs, bolster the local tax base and strengthen the economy, according to project consultant Dan Beattie. It’s a member of the area’s most influential partnerships, such as the city of Troy Downtown Development Authority (DDA), Leadership Oakland, Michigan Business & Professional Association, Local Business Network, Multicultural Business Coalition, Oakland Chamber Network and Oakland County Wellness Coalition. It’s at the forefront of moving the economy forward—business by business.

The partnerships with other area organizations are leading to ongoing efforts to assist with DDA initiatives for economic development and to develop a business incubator to provide affordable space for up-start businesses.

“These kind of economic conditions foster new businesses, and we’re focusing on how to nurture them,” said 2010 Chamber Board Chair Patricia Zatina. “We never forget the benefits of having the large company headquarters here in Troy, but with the shift in economics, we are also looking at how to help the smaller companies.”

The primary benefit of the Troy Chamber is its ability to take its membership and create a type of big-business. Its initiatives include marketing the Chamber and the Troy area through new social networking outlets and using its numbers to bring benefits to member business that they can’t afford on their own. Throughout 2010, new programs will be launched to foster entrepreneurial spirit and provide cost savings for members.

“2010 will be a big year for change for the Troy Chamber,” said Troy Chamber President Michele Hodges. “We want to distinguish ourselves beyond the stereotypical chamber of commerce. We’re a Chamber of progress. We’re a Chamber for the future and for growth.”

For more than a decade, the Troy Chamber of Commerce has offered Blue Cross Blue Shield of Michigan’s program designed specifically for chamber members. With the chamber-sponsored program, members are guaranteed the best available price. In addition, members have access to the widest array of options so they can maximize their savings with a plan that is right for them.

The chamber provides a unique proprietary on-line tool for individuals and businesses to review health plans, compare savings options and get quotes. The goal of the website is for you to have a fuller understanding of the drivers that influence your health plan.

Encouraging businesses to color outside the lines
FROM INDEPENDENT START-UPS to franchises, healthcare to real estate, businesses of all sizes and types benefit from Troy’s many assets, including its convenient central location within the Detroit metro region.

The prime location is a key reason Cosmetic Dentistry Institute, owned and operated by doctors Craig and Marcy Goldin, recently relocated their practice to Troy from Clawson. Recognized as one of the top cosmetic practices in the nation, patients come from across Southeast Michigan and beyond.

“Troy is closer to our patients,” said Robbie Curry, office manager. “We’re more centrally located, closer to I-75 and Big Beaver and convenient for patients who fly in.”

It’s all about location for Pradip Sengupta, as well. Sengupta is president and CEO of IPS Technology Services. Founded in 2003 and focused on healthcare, the company is a technology services provider to small to medium businesses in Michigan.

“I’ve been in Troy a long time and don’t want to go anywhere else,” he said. “It’s a good central location to conduct business.”

Troy is close to primary markets, making access easy.

“I like the transportation system and the proximity to the metro area,” said attorney Bill Girardot of Stark Reagan law firm.

A specialist in commercial transactions and corporate law, Troy’s assets give Girardot cause for optimism for the city’s long-term vitality as community development projects mature.

“We’re well situated to experience good progress in future years,” he said. “And as Troy goes, so go the fortunes of our law firm.”

Once the job market picks up, we’ll pick up more quickly than other communities,” said Neal Doshi of the Doshi Group, leaders in architectural design and energy efficient
Companies enjoy a competitive edge in a challenging economy

According to Nick Pyykkonen, founder of Pink Rose Inspirational Foundation, a nonprofit organization launched in 2008 to raise funds for breast cancer research. “Troy seems to be a center for technology and innovation,” he said.

The foundation has found friends among the Chamber members, corporations, nonprofits and other important networks. “In today’s economy, everyone has to support each other,” Pyykkonen said. Confidence in the vitality of the Troy community has deep roots. Beaumont Hospital, with its Troy campus, is a longtime community supporter.

“We saw Troy in terms of what it could be,” said John Labriola, senior vice president and hospital director, Royal Oak. Today, Beaumont continues to invest in Troy, completing a $58.2 million emergency room expansion in 2008, enhancing community assets and increasing Troy’s position as a contemporary and vibrant city.

Colleges Invest in the Workforce

Competing in the global economy requires up-to-date skills. Troy’s Walsh College, the area’s only all-business school, and the International Academy of Design and Technology are only two institutions providing relevant, career-oriented training. With its focus on innovation, the Academy’s new Construction Management and Design degree prepares professionals for the new wave in construction.

“Students entering now, in 36 months when they graduate, will have many opportunities,” said Jordan Kotubey, the Academy’s Information Technology Director.

Walsh College’s Presidential Advisory Committee meets regularly to gain insight and discuss issues impacting the region.

“This provides us valuable background as we continue to develop programs in support of the business community,” said John Lichtenberg, college Vice President/Chief of Marketing & Enrollment Officer.

Other area establishments for education and training include The Academy of Court Reporting, Baker College, Central Michigan University in Metro Detroit, Davenport University, Dorsey Schools, ITT Technical Institute, Lawrence Technological University, Macomb Community College, Northwood University, Oakland Community College, Oakland University, University of Michigan School of Management and University of Phoenix. From certificate programs to MBAs, professionals can gain new skills or immerse themselves in degree programs, making them more marketable in the workforce. AN ADVOCATE ON ALL FRONTS and a key collaborator in the planned Troy/Birmingham Multi-Modal Transit Center, the Troy Chamber has championed the project’s successful development from the beginning, lobbying for approval in Lansing and Washington D.C. The $7 million regional mass transit hub, including a transit station and pedestrian tunnel beneath the tracks, is a joint initiative between the communities of Troy and Birmingham.

Located near the shared border along Maple and Coolidge Roads, the Transit Center is planned to replace the existing Birmingham Amtrak station and incorporates bus service, bicycles, taxis and car rentals. It will provide a transit point and connection with the Detroit Regional Mass Transit plan, improving the attractiveness, reliability, safety and economic efficiency of rail passenger service.

The Center’s design incorporates green practices for certification by Leadership Energy & Environmental Design (LEED), a national standard for sustainable building. Features include a green roof, geo-thermal heating, LED lighting, water recycling, use of...
Planned transit center to spark economic bounce of regional and recycled materials and native plants.

Funding is expected to be provided through several federal sources with construction starting in early 2010. Completion is targeted for later in the year. The cities are to provide $1.5 million in matching dollars, said project consultant Dan Beattie.

A two-day Troy/Birmingham visioning session, attended by a broad spectrum of community members, involved roundtable discussions, lectures and presentations to establish shared goals for transit stop development. The district vision follows Smart Growth principles by providing transportation choices and encourages mixed use development to increase density of commercial, office and residential activity, as well as serving as a showplace for emerging technologies. Integrated, livable and walkable, proposals call for flexible zoning and for creating public open spaces and public active spaces. The proposed district would be bordered by Crooks, Adams, Maple and Lincoln streets.

According to studies by the University of Michigan and Transportation Riders United of Detroit, the project is anticipated to increase property values between 40 and 200 percent, according to studies by TRU of Detroit and the University of Michigan. Studies also project private investment growth, indicating that each $1 invested in public transit yields $4 to $8 in local private investment.

The Transit Center project is endorsed by diverse groups in the region, including the Troy Chamber of Commerce, Automation Alley, ITT Technical Institute, Engineers Local 324, Wayne County and Suburban Mobility for Regional Transportation (SMART).

In December 2009, the Transit Center came one step closer to reality thanks to Congressman Gary Peters and the support of Senators Stabenow and Levin, who secured $1.3 million in federal funding for the proposed regional transportation hub.

Movie producers find the community’s central location in Southeast Michigan means urban settings, hills and lakes are all found only 20 minutes from the city.

STAR QUALITY

Troy courts the Hollywood movie industry

HOLLYWOOD HAS FLOCKED to Michigan since 2008 when the state enacted a 40 to 42 percent rebate program for the film industry, opening new doors of opportunity for those communities savvy enough to snag a production, bringing cast, crew and their dollars to town.

The Troy Chamber’s Hospitality Committee, chaired by Somerset Inn Manager Duane Swanson, is courting major industry players, on their turf as well as at home, to establish Troy as a film-friendly community. The campaign includes personal pitches to directors and producers, location tours and legislative advocacy.

In the summer of 2008, the Somerset Inn housed 95 staff members of Clint Eastwood’s “Gran Torino” production for a 10-week stay. Fall 2009 brought cast and crew members to Troy during the filming of a MGM remake of “Red Dawn.”

“Movie producers find the community’s central location in Southeast Michigan means urban settings, hills and lakes are all found only 20 minutes from the city,” said Pam Holland Somerset Inn director of operations.

The business community’s romance with the film industry is ignited by its economic charms. A movie production can generate revenues in the seven figure range, according to Holland.
Celebrating 18 Years
In the Troy Community

For 18 years, being part of the community is something Toyoda Gosei has taken very seriously. We are dedicated to making a difference in our community, our workplace, our town and our schools. That is why our North American automotive manufacturing, technical and sales facilities of Toyoda Gosei sponsor a wide range of activities in our surrounding areas. We make these investments and participate in these activities for one reason: we’re as committed to our community as we are to developing the highest quality automotive parts for our customers.

Let's design, engineer and manufacture increasingly practical innovations. Let's protect drivers and passengers. Let's develop technologies that improve the quality of healthcare. Let's give people more ways to connect with devices and networks. Together, we can do it and thrive within the limits of the planet's resources. With innovations that are safe, green and connected. delphi.com/innovation
